

Two contenders for your crown

Written By Geoff G Turner © 2000. Finished: 9.50pm, 4th April.

V1 On the right side, you've got the tall guy, the current reigning defender
And on the left side, you've got the breakaway, the new contender
Right has a good paying job; the other is still in school
Right has the connections; the other can play the fool
So fork out the cash, let the betting commence, I give the challenger 20 to 1
I doubt that he can go the distance, considering his current form

V2 On the right side, you've got the tall guy, the current reigning defender
And on the left side, you've got the breakaway, the new contender
Right has the wins under his belt, but there's word that he's losing touch
Left has been koed in the first round a lot, but he always gets back up
There's so much at stake, for heaven's sake! Can you hear me above the din?
Right has the might, but left is the underdog, who feels that one day he'll win...

Chorus So here are the two contenders for your crown
One will walk off with you on his arm; the other will find sorrows to drown
The stakes are high, and it's true, that love is a battlefield
And a winner won't be determined until all the cards have been cut and dealt

Instrumental

V3 On the right side, you've got the tall guy, the current reigning defender
And on the left side, you've got the breakaway, the new contender
Right has the money, right has the car, right is brave and bold
Left has the heart to love you with, with a future large and dreams of gold
There's so much at stake, for heaven's sake! Can you hear me above the din?
Right has the might, but left is the underdog, who feels that one day he'll win...

Repeat Chorus twice

Instrumental and fade.

A bit Regurgitatorish.

Tenth place in the 2000 Australian Songwriters Association competition – lyrics section.